C) Organització del grup

Group organisation

C.1) Expliciteu els reptes científics o objectius estratègics del grup per als propers 3 anys tenint en compte que estiguin dirigits a consolidar, mantenir o incrementar la recerca d'excel·lència dins el vostre àmbit, així com la internacionalització i la transferència de coneixement. (2 pàgines com a màxim) / State clearly the scientific challenges or strategic objectives for the next 3 years, taking into account the fact that the aim is to consolidate, maintain or increase research of excellence in your field, internationalisation and increase knowledge transfer (maximum 2 pages)

SCIENTIFIC CHALLENGES AND STRATEGIC OBJECTIVES

The main scientific challenge of the Geography and Gender Research Group (GGG) is to consolidate the gender approach in Geography through two broad research lines: (1) Gendered Urban Geographies and (2) Gender and Rurality. Our project is a continuation of the SGR 2014 but with a noticeable widening of the methodological and theoretical framework.

The second scientific challenge is to innovate and enhance the use of the qualitative methods including collaborative methods and participative action. Moreover, the intersectional approach will be enhanced.

It is worthy to mention right from the beginning that the GGG is first Gender and Geography Research Group of the Catalan and Spanish Geography and the cohesion of the GGG is very strong as it is shown in many of the joint publications as well as in the joint collaborations in several international and national projects.

1. GENDERED URBAN GEOGRAPHIES

Since its creation in 1987 at the UAB, the GGG has introduced and developed the Gender approach within the Catalan and Spanish geography in urban and rural issues with a view to internationalize its findings. This challenge went hand in hand with the development of qualitative methodology, which was rarely found in the geography of our country, although it was widely known in international social geography.

Our research has focused on everyday practices and uses of the city and on the development of the feeling of belonging by different social groups, in particular women. Since 2001 we have worked on the integration capacity of the cities (in particular public spaces) taking into account the social, cultural, political and symbolic dimension. The findings of this research have made very clear the need to study the city from a gender approach for a full comprehension and intervention of the urban milieu.

On the basis of our experience and findings in Gender Geography, the GGG has consolidated a pioneer research in Spanish and Catalan geography on the Geographies of Children and Youth. The competitive projects in this field, the organization in 2009 at the UAB of the Second International Conference on Geographies of Children, Youth and Families (CSO2008-04513-E/SOCI), the participation in international scientific meetings as well as the competitive project on Geographies of children and youth: Gender, daily life and spatial practices (FEM2012-34794) are a sign of the excellence achieved in this field. This latest project deals with the configuration and evolution of the everyday life and spatial practices of children and teenagers in different geographical environments and at different scales. The focus is on the evolution of their everyday practices within the context of the present crisis that has strongly increased social and economic inequalities in the social groups' object of our research. Special emphasis has been given to personal and friendship networks, form of socialisation, mobility patterns, meeting places and formative activities. In our results emerges a deepening gender inequality as well as opinions about public spaces by many invisible users of the city; and these results have to be taken into account by experts and urban planners. A noticeable contribution of the Group has been the introduction to the international literature the European Mediterranean perspective as most of the publications deal with other geographical regions.

Along this line of research, two international congresses have been organized or will be organized by the GGG at the UAB: The International Conference on Feminist Geographies and Intersectionality: places, identities and knowledges in July 2016, and the IV European Geographies of Sexualities Conference, that will be held in September 2017. The Conference in 2016 was attended by almost one hundred participants from 21 different countries and dealt with topics such as work and gender contract, identities and representations, intersectional theory, masculinities, methodologies, mobility and others. This Conference reinforced the intersectionality approach of the GGG as it related gender with other power structures (mainly age, sexuality, social class and ethnicity) that constitute the spatial experience of people. The second Conference to be held this September has more than two hundred registrations from all over the world, 5 plenary sessions and 32 paper sessions. It will be a dialogue between gender researchers and activists about how social movements and politics across different scales shape how people experience, resist, enact, and perform their identities in particular in particular gender and sexuality.

Intercultural relations and migrations have also become an important topic of research for our Group, as both concepts are very relevant in the study of social inclusion in our present cities, always taking into account gender differences. We are doing research on several topics like the construction of identities of the youth from mixed families; labour mobility in international qualified migrations; migration experiences and feelings of foreign young people in Spanish cities and on migrant' experiences in border cities or in cooperation across the international borders cities. Members of the GGG are doing research along these lines in international projects as well as national ones (see section B. Resource acquisition by the Group).

Strategic Objectives of line of research 1:

- 1) To consolidate the introduction of a gender approach into the analysis of the city at all geographical scales.
- 2) To increase the intersectional analysis (theoretical, empirical, and methodological) in the research on social inclusion in the urban environment.
- 3) To analyze migration within the cities taking into account how the spatial perspective builds up the feeling of place.
- 4) To foster innovation in qualitative methodologies adding new research methods as well as enhancing the previously used ones.

2. GENDER AND RURALITY

This consolidated line of our research deals now with one important challenge of our rural milieu that is its depopulation, in particular of young women who were well qualified professionally (Spain is among the European countries that have undergone the most intense process of rural masculinisation). Social expectations and values in rural communities have been stressed as important drivers for women in the search for alternative lifestyles to an urban environment although some research indicates that women are essential to the social and economic sustainability of rural areas. But at the beginning of 21st century, immigration, new economic initiatives, and the development of infrastructure and services explain how in some areas of Spain, well-educated women decide to stay or to move to the countryside to carry out their professional activity. This is a new phenomenon after many decades of female outmigration (that also occurs in other European regions) and it is very important to document it and to analyze women they cope with their professional and personal activities.

Nevertheless it is worthy to include in the research the study of well-educated men living in the rural areas, in order to analyze and compare the construction of new femininities and masculinities as well as their social and economic contribution (of men and women) to a changing rural environment. To deepen the future development of this process we have recently included in the research discussions (focus groups) with very young women and men dealing with their experiences and their expectations about the future in order to think over collectively about the future of the rural environment. Up to the present, our empirical research has dealt with two Spanish contrasting regions, Catalonia and Galicia.

Strategic Objectives of the line of research 2:

- 1) To show and demonstrate that gender power structure is basic in the settlement of population in rural areas.
- 2) To show and demonstrate the relation between rural innovation and social construction of new femininities and masculinities.
- 3) To consider and critically evaluate feminist research on rural masculinities from our own research experience.

STRUCTURE OF THE GEOGRAPHY AND GENDER RESEARCH GROUP (GGG)

External Collaborators (6) (number of doctors: 6)

Alejandro Armas García (University of Leipzig, Germany)
Lourdes Beneria (Cornell Univesity, USA)
Brais Estevez Vilarinho (Universidade Fivalarinho da Bahia, Brasil)
Janice Monk (University of Arizona, USA)
Susana Veleda da Silva (Universidade Federal Rio Grande do Sul, Brasil)
Perla Zusman (Consejo de Investigaciones Científicas y Técnicas-CONICET, Argentina)

Thirteen (13) persons -among members (7) and collaborators (6) - are members of the GGG (10 women and 3 men), and 12 of them are doctors. Only one member is not a doctor, who is doing her PhD under the supervision of one member, Maria Prats, with a scholarship of the Generalitat de Catalunya (FI-DGR 2015). Out of the seven members, five are from the UAB, one from the Universitat de Girona and one from the Universitat Pompeu Fabra. Among the six collaborators, one is from the University of Leipzig (Germany), one from Cornell University (USA), one from Universidade Federal de Bahia, (Brazil), one from University of Arizona (USA), one from Universidade Federal Rio Grande do Sul (Brasil) and one from CONACIT (Argentina). All of them have worked with the GGG for long time and were members of the previous SGR 2014-16 with the exception of Alejandro Armas from Leipzig (who had already been working with us in several occasions).

The central pivot of the GGG is the gender approach and the development of qualitative methodologies in geography. The GGG has also been pioneer in Catalonia and Spain in introducing research on social and cultural geography, as well as on qualitative methods in geography. Therefore, the gender approach, within the social and cultural geography, is the general framework where all the researchers of the GGG work and they do along the two lines of research above mentioned.

All the members of the GGG (Mireia Baylina, Xavier Ferrer, Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon, Margot Mecca, Anna Ortiz, Maria Prats and Isabel Salamaña) have worked or work now along the first line of research that is Gendered Urban Geographies, and they do this research through competitive European and Spanish research projects (5 of them are listed in section B. Acquisition of resources). As it was mentioned in section C.1. this first line of research has a long tradition in the GGG (since 2000) and 6 out of the 7 PhD thesis presented between 2014 and 2017 deal with this topic, whereas the other PhD could be classified between the rural and urban lines of research. The PhD candidate, Margot Mecca, works also along the Gendered Urban Geographies with her thesis on Les practiques espacials, la mobilitat i el gènere en persones adolescents-joves durant la nit. In addition, seven out of the 11 Mater's thesis chaired by members of the GGG between 2014-2017 are along this line of research. Also, a large number of the joint publications are product of this research line (9 of the 15 mentioned in this application, 8 of them published in international indexed journals or in books by international and prestigious publishers). This joint research is displayed very clearly with the publication of the book Espacios públicos, género y diversidad. Geografías para unas ciudades inclusivas, edited by Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon, Anna Ortiz and Maria Prats (Barcelona, Icaria 2014). Two members of the GGG (Mireia Baylina and Isabel Salamaña) as well as two collaborators (Alejandro Armas and Brais Estevez) have also written several chapters. The book includes theoretical, empirical as well as methodological contributions on the relation between public urban spaces and citizenship from a gender and intersectional perspective. It is a very useful book for a wide array of public (researchers as well as planners) and it is highly innovative as gender -together with interseccionalidad- are the pivotal points for explanation.

Three members work in the second research line, Gender and Rurality (Mireia Baylina, Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon and Isabel Salamaña). This line, developed by the GGG since 1987, goes ahead from 2011 with new challenges derived from all the socioeconomic and spatial transformations of the past decade. This research is developed through five of the projects mentioned in this application (section B. Resources acquisition). The results are reflected in three of the 15 publications, edited by indexed journals or by international first-ranked editorials. The GGG has supervised four Master thesis in this line.

The collaborative relation with the members who are just collaborators dates from long time ago and most of them (5 out of 6) were already in the previous SGR 2014-16 and the new one, Alejandro Armas, did his PhD with a former collaborator, Dr. Luz Marina Garcia Herrera. The fact that all they are members of international institutions shows the relevance that the GGG gives to the internationalization of research.

The GGG organizes seminars of discussion quite often during the academic year and the members, and some of the collaborators attend them. They usually take place on Fridays morning. The seminars deal with some new and original topic related to our research. The first part is an internal meeting of the GGG and the second includes a lecture and a reading discussion. The seminars are open to all our PhD candidates, master students as well as other members of the Department and the Faculty of Arts. Young academics and PhD candidates find these seminars extremely useful and encouraging for their research. We plan to follow this kind of successful seminars during the next three years.

The GGG is a Consolidated Group of Research with the present Principal Investigator (Mireia Baylina) since 2014, and it is the continuation of a Group of Research (with PI as Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon) that has been funded and recognized since 1995 by the Generalitat de Catalunya. C.3) Destaqueu, quines accions realitzades o previstes pel grup referents a la inclusió de la perspectiva RRI (gènere, participació ciutadana, accés obert, ètica, educació científica i governança) en la concepció, l'inici i el desenvolupament de l'activitat i la transferència dels resultats de la recerca del grup i en les accions de divulgació científica (3 pàgines com a màxim) / Highlight which action the group takes to include RRI (gender, public participation, open access, ethics, scientific education, governance) in the conception, initiation, development and transfer of the results of the group's research and in the scientific dissemination of these results (màxim 3 pages).

The Geography and Gender Research Group (GGG) works according to the basic principles that should inspire a research, from the freedom to choose it, the honesty applicable to all phases of the research work (initial formulation of the hypotheses, methodological design, analysis of data, publication of the results) and the responsibility to ensure that the research is done in accordance with the UAB's research basic principles and the conditions defined by the funding institutions.

Gender equality is central in our research activity and defines the type of group we are. This means the GGG group is completely aligned with the aims of the Research and Responsible Innovation perspective (RRI) which includes the relationship between scientific development and society's values, needs and expectations. The consolidation of the gender perspective in geography is our goal and main challenge, a will for the transformation of the discipline and the society. Therefore, in the case of the RRI area of gender equality, the GGG demonstrates a sustained commitment over time to make geography a discipline that does not ignore half of the human population, neither in their experiences nor in their needs and expectations. The GGG maintains a firm stance on gender equality, not only in the research (process and content) but also in the teaching, management and knowledge transfer activities towards society developed by its members as it is shown in the following activities:

The GGG is a member of the Commission on Gender and Geography of the International Geographical Union (IGU) since its creation in 1988. Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon was a founding member and secretary (1988-1996) and Mireia Baylina has served as a member of the Steering committee (2008-2013). This organization has awarded Dr. Garcia Ramon the Lauréat d'Honneur (Beijing, August 2016) in recognition of her career and close collaboration with the IGU.

At the international level, Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon has been elected a member of the Society of Woman Geographers (since 1995).

The GGG is also a member of the National Women's Council Council of Catalonia (CNDC) with three representatives (Maria Prats, Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon and Isabel Salamaña), regularly participating in the two annual plenary meetings conducted by the CNDC throughout the Catalan territory.

The GGG is a member of the Inter-University Women and Gender Studies Institute (IIEDG) since its creation in 2008, and its members have been involved since then in its main governing and management bodies. As members of the of the Standing Committee Maria Prats has served from 2008 to 2013 and Isabel Salamaña is serving since 2013. The IIEDG promotes the Official Interuniversity Master's Degree in Women, Gender and Citizenship Studies. Different group members have served as Final Master's Project Coordinators: Maria Prats (2008-2011), Anna Ortiz (2011-2015) and Isabel Salamaña is the present Coordinator since 2015. The IIEDG promotes also the Interuniversity Doctoral Program in Gender Studies: Cultures, Societies and Policies. Mireia Baylina is serving as a member of the Doctorate Academic Committee since 2013 and she is the Coordinator of this Program at the UAB since it has started in 2015. In this framework GGG members participate in the plenary meetings and academic events and are faculty members of both the Master and the Doctoral Program (Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon, Maria Prats, Isabel Salamaña, Anna Ortiz, Mireia Baylina).

The GGG also participates in the management and teaching at the UAB's Minor in Gender Studies since its beginning and Maria Prats, is the Minor's coordinator since 2015. GGG members of the group are members of the Study Committee for the preparation of a new Interdisciplinary Degree in Gender Studies, driven and coordinated by the UAB's Faculty of Arts. Maria Prats has been a member of the founding commission created in fall 2016 and has been replaced by Anna Ortiz since April 2017.

GGG contributes to the Advisory Council of the UAB's Observatory for Equality (Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon, Maria Prats and Mireia Baylina).

GGG follows the UAB's Code of Best Practices in research (Council of Government's Agreement 30.1.13), which, in the case of research with human beings, requests that the people participating in the research is informed about its purpose, inconvenience and benefits and the explicit consent of the participants or their legal representatives or guardians, if they are minor, are required. Consent is also required to capture images of these people developing their activities or on participatory walks in the city. Likewise, GGG maintains the confidentiality of the data obtained in accordance with the provisions of the personal data protection regulations, do not transfer them to other projects and/or researchers without authorization. When participation of UAB students is foreseen, it is guaranteed and it is also explained, that they are included in a voluntary and freely. GGG records the data in a clear way, identifying who has produced them and on what date and conserves them, in physical and computer support in the centre where we carry out the research. All the members of the team have access to it.

These ethical principles have urged members of the GGG to participate in Solidarity Autonomous Foundation activities as members of the Advisory Council for education for the development (Maria Prats). On the other hand, Mireia Baylina and Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon, as coordinator of the Doctorate Program in Geography and member of the Academic Committee of the Program, respectively, have organized a conference and debate session in December 2016 with the representative of the UAB's Ethics Commission on Animal and Human Experimentation in Social and Human Sciences, to know how to apply the code of good practices in the research of doctoral students and researchers in our Department.

Results dissemination is obviously an ethical duty for the researchers. We would like to increase open access to our scientific results, publishing in open access journals. In any case, the publications derived from our research will be in accordance with the same criteria of honesty and rigor mentioned: the UAB membership will be recorded as well as the acknowledgments to the people and institutions that have contributed to it, including technical support staff (for example, in the elaboration of cartography), and the funding support obtained to carry out the research. The same will be done when GGG members disseminate research in the informative media.

Social actors and citizens have been involved in our research from the beginning. GGG member Isabel Salamaña, has developed a long and relevant career at the Girona's local government (she has been a Girona's City Council member from 1992 to 2011, with direct responsibility in areas such as the Environment and Territorial and Strategic Planning, Presidency and Mobility, Safety and Urban Planning) bringing an added value to our group. Dr. Salamaña promoted and was responsible, among others, for the Plan for everyday spaces and for intergenerational relations and the playgrounds as spaces for coexistence and civility, an initiative closely linked to our research. According to this purpose of linking social actors and citizens to research, all our research includes a very important initial part of in depth interviews with social agents (technicians, educators, politicians...) taking into account their diversity and favouring the visibility and voice of socially vulnerable people. In some cases, we have worked with them collaboratively (for example working with high school students and collaborating with teachers who have included our research in their programs). Discussion and results presentation sessions have also been developed.

GGG's researchers are especially sensitive to the promotion of formal and informal scientific education. Some of the members have done research, for example, in the informal learning of young girls about issues of access, use and experience in the public space bearing in mind the normative structure of a patriarchal society; and research is carried out on how young boys and girls learn informally from their activities in social movements, to resist and act in rural societies that are still very conservative or even oppressive towards certain groups (see section A.1.). Finally, governance issues are also addressed, in particular in gender and rurality research, when women have become visible in government positions in their municipalities or when they have been explicitly referred to in the literature.

Scientific innovation also involves publicizing and analysing innovative social initiatives. GGG shows experiences of innovative entrepreneurship in the rural world lead by young adults with university education who transfer their training to the entrepreneurial project. In this sense, GGG brings back to the social and scientific world the activity they develop. RRI perspective becomes central in the activities developed by GGG members, from the project conception to its development and in the results transfer. GGG plans for the future will deep and enhance this dimension.

C.4) Inclogueu en aquest apartat, també, les activitats de supervisió que els membres del grup facin a personal en formació que sobretot destaquen la capacitat formativa del grup en relació amb la transmissió a personal novell de coneixement i estratègies dirigides a fomentar l'impacte social de la recerca i la participació o el lideratge del grup en activitats formatives i màsters (2 pàgines com a màxim) / Include also in this section any supervision undertaken by group members of staff in training and the group's training capabilities to transfer to new staff of knowledge and strategies directed at new lines of production of impact results and participation or leadership of training activities and master's degree courses (maximum 2 page)

GROUP'S TRAINING CAPABILITIES

Group's training capabilities are quite relevant as we participate in teaching at the bachelor's master and PhD level in topics related to our research, and we reinforce the introduction of the gender approach in geography at all levels of university teaching and research.

TEACHING IN BACHELOR'S, MASTER'S AND MINOR COURSES

The members of the GGG are teaching courses at all university levels, in particular in the degrees Grau de Geografia i Ordenació del Territori (UAB) and in the Grau de Geografia, Ordenació del Territori i Gestió del Mediambient (UdG) on courses like Gender and Geography and Social and Cultural Geography as well as in other degrees where the members are also teaching, like Grau d'Humanitats (UPF) and Grau d'Educació (UAB).

Members of the GGG are also teaching at the Official Interuniversity Master's Degree in Women, Gender and Citizenship Studies since its creation in 2018 (Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon, Maria Prats, Isabel Salamaña, Anna, Ortiz, Mireia Baylina) in a subject titled Dones i Espais: món urbà i urbà (also on the online version). They also introduce gender and feminist methodologies in other Masters like Master Oficial en Estudis Territorials i de Població (UAB, Anna Ortiz) and in the Master en Canvi ambiental: anàlisi i gestió (UdG, Isabel Salamaña).

They also teach at the Minor in Gender Studies of the UAB since its creation with the subject Geography and Gender (Mireia Baylina).

(2 pages maximum)*

SCIENTIFIC INTERNATIONAL COLLABORATIONS

One of the main assets of the GGG is its degree of internationalization, not only in the CV's of some of its members but also in their publications, as well as in the list of collaborators that we present in this application. In effect, since long time ago we think that we have been pioneer in internationalizing Catalan and Spanish Human Geography and we have made great efforts to participate in foreign international geography as well as encouraging young and medium age researchers to expand their academic horizons in well-known foreign geography departments.

Let us comment about the relevance of our international collaborators that we present in this application and their academic institutions.

Professor Janice Monk (University of Arizona, USA) is Doctor Honoris Causa by the UAB (2013). Janice Monk has made profound contributions to advancing our knowledge of gender and geography for more than four decades and has also sustained and led initiatives to enhance research and teaching in higher education within international geography. As Executive Director for 25 years of a regional research institute at the University of Arizona, she fostered interdisciplinary research, educational, and outreach programs that addressed ethnic and cultural diversity, bringing together scholars from different US universities as well as international ones.

In addition to her work in the United States, Janice Monk has been a sustained supporter of international collaboration. She has been recognized by a number of awards, among others the Lauréat d'Honneur of the International Geographical Union (IGU), which identified her as a world ambassador for the discipline; the Australia International Medal of the Institute of Australian Geographers; and the Lifetime Achievement Honours and the Enhancing Diversity Honours of the Association of American Geographers (AAG), which she also served as President (2001-2002).

For many decades, Dr. Monk has provided intellectual stimulus to the community of feminist geographers worldwide and has long practiced an international and inclusive geography. She has consistently argued for the rights of those who must struggle to have their voices heard outside of the Anglo hegemonic realm. She has hosted numerous international scholars at the University of Arizona, including a large number of present and former members of our GGG. She has collaborated with members of the GGG since 1986, and has jointly published with some GGG members (in particular Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon) along the two lines of research in this application.

Professor Lourdes Beneria (Cornell University, USA) has been essential in our GGG since the 1990's, and she is known worldwide in the field of gender analysis from a theoretical and empirical perspective. In particular, Dr. Beneria has deepened gender theory from a socio-economic perspective and was the first to develop the key concepts of feminist theory such as production, reproduction or sexual division of labor, taking into account the spatial dimension that interests a lot to geography. Her Department in Regional Planning at Cornell University has been a center of excellence in urban planning since the 1900's.

Professor Susana Veleza da Silva (Universidade Federal Rio Grande do Sul, Brasil) is a specialist in the analysis of the concept of work from a gender perspective within the context of Latin America. Since the early 1990's she has contributed to the GGG in topics such as the informal economy in particular with her PhD submitted at the UAB and chaired by Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon. She has been a pioneer in introducing gender approach in Brazilian geography as well as in mainstreaming gender dimension in other social sciences in Brazil (like demography etc.). Lately, she has considered other dimensions such a sexuality and ethnicity that are emerging now in Brazilian geography. The Department of Geography at the Universidade Federal Rio Grande do Sul enjoys a high reputation in research on gender geography and it is an important focus of dissemination of gender geography in Southern Brasil.

Dr. Perla Zusman (Consejo de Investigaciones Científicas y Técnicas, CONACYT, Argentina) has worked with members of the GGG since the late 1990's, including her PhD thesis on borders and border's lines that was submitted at the UAB and chaired by Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon. Thus, she has been very relevant on the research on borders and migration of line 1. Dr. Zusman has also focused her research on theory and methodology in geography, in particular applied to landscape and heritage in the urban as well the rural milieu. Her academic institution CONACYT at Buenos Aires is one of the most prestigious centres of CONACYT in Argentina.

Dr. Brais Estevez is now a postdoctoral student at Universidade Federal de Bahia, Brazil and he has been a member of the GGG since he obtained a scholarship for his PhD on the use and appropriation of a public space in Barcelona (Plaza Lesseps), thesis submitted in 2014 with a Cum Laude, and later he obtained the PhD Excellence Award. In his PhD and following publications, he has applied new methodologies as Participatory Action Research (PAR), Actor-Network Theory and Non-Representational Theory in gendered urban and social geography. This theoretical background will be very useful for both lines of research of this application. The Department of Geography of the Universidade de Bahia is wellknown in his focus on theory within the Latin American context.

The in-coming new collaborator Dr. Alejandro Armas (University of Leipzig, Germany) has obtained a recent postdoctoral position. In January 2016, he submitted his PhD at the University of La Laguna on social urban geography with a focus on public urban spaces in Santa Cruz de Tenerife. Before this, he participated in several European and national projects with some of the members of the GGG (in particular Anna Ortiz). Presently, he still participating (with our former member Luz Marina Garcia Herrera) in a competitive project titled Crisis y Vulnerabilidad en ciudades insulares españolas. Transformacions en los espacios de reproduccion social that could bring many synergies with our first line of research. The Institut für Geographie at the University of Leipzig is one of the most well known in social and regional geography in Germany.

Besides the collaborators of this application, we have strong contacts with other academic institutions as well as with academics with similar lines of research. To mention a sample we list them below:

Professor Dina Vaiou, from National Technical University (NTU) at Athens (Greece), is an expert in Gender and urban planning and in the role of women in the development of the cities, in particular those working in the informal sector. She has visited several times UAB participating in numerous international seminars since 1993 and members of the GGG have been in her university for shorts periods. Dr.Vaiou has participated with our Group in 7 Erasmus International courses since 1990 to 1998 (Amsterdam, Barcelona, Sheffield, Durham, Roskilde, Athens and again Barcelona).She is in the Urban Planning Department at the NTU of Athens, one of the most prestigious centres in Greece for architecture and urban studies.

Professor Tovi Fenster (Tel Aviv University, Israel) has expertise on city and gender and planning, and she is well known internationally. She has been the president of the Commission on Gender and Geography of the International Geographical Union and has collaborated in numerous activities of the GGG, in particular in seminars. She also organized (together with members Mireia Baylina and Maria Dolors Garcia Ramon) a session at the Nordic Geographers Meeting at Reykjavik (2014) on one of the topics of our application, the role of gendered urban public spaces in the building up of the cities. The Department of Geography of Tel Aviv University is one the most prestigious in Israel after the one at the Hebrew University at Jerusalem.

Professor Cindi Katz (City University of New York, USA), is a key figure on the research of Geographies of Children and Youth, being a pioneer in geography on the topic since the early 1980's. She has participated in several international congresses organized by the GGG as a keynote speaker, and has been invited by the Group (together with the Catalan Geographical Society) a few times for our regular seminars. Some members of the Group have spent their sabbatical in her Department and presently Maria Prats is on sabbatical at her Department (April to June 2017). This Department has been pioneer in Children's and Youth Geographies and their relation to cities as well as to rural milieus (Dr. Katz' PhD in the 1980's was about children' experiences of space and environment in rural Sudan). Later on, the members of her department, as well as Cindi Katz herself have focused on urban public spaces.

Professor Cristobal Mendoza (Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana de México) works together with member Anna Ortiz on questions about the use and feelings of belonging of qualified international migrants in urban public spaces, and as result they have published together (see publications). The Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana de Mexico has recently developed a new degree in social geography that has reinforced substantially the gender approach in Mexican geography.

Professor Nina Gunnerud Berg (Norwegian University of Science and Technology, Norway) is an expert on gender and rurality, in particular in the Scandinavian region. She has collaborated and published with member Mireia Baylina on comparative experiences and representations about rurality in Spain and Norway. This link with Mireia Baylina has facilitated the creation of a research network between the Scandinavian countries and others from Southern Europe, and recently they have just applied for a European research project.
